

CBD USE

CBD is readily available and becoming immensely popular as treatment for a variety of health issues including chronic pain, gastrointestinal issues, and more. CBD products are legal and many people report great improvement in their symptoms.

The challenge is that CBD products are not FDA regulated and may contain higher levels of THC than stated on the label. This can result in failed drug tests. DOT does not exempt drivers who test positive due to CBD use.

The results of a failed CDL drug test must now be reported into a database, making it very difficult for these drivers to find future work.

Short answer: IF YOU'RE A CDL, DO NOT USE CBD.
